Re: Demand for Retraction of February 11, 2014 Article
by Pump Terminator

To Whom It May Concern:

Please be advised that this firm is counsel to NanoViricides, Inc., a publicly owned corporation whose common stock trades on the NYSE MKT under the symbol "NNVC" (the "Company").

We are writing to demand the immediate retraction by Seeking Alpha, also known as Seeking Alpha Ltd. of an article posted by Pump Terminator on February 11, 2014 regarding the Company entitled "NanoViricides: House of Cards With-80% Downside, 'Strong Sell' Recommendation".

It is clear that the author, likely working with other short sellers, orchestrated the publication of the article in connection with a massive short position calculate to manipulate the price of the Company's common stock downward in a sell-off which accounted for the trading of 8,000,000 shares that day, more than twenty times the daily average. The article was posted, and presumably written by an anonymous poster who calls itself "Pump Terminator". Pump Terminator discloses that it has a short position in the Company's stock and touts itself as a hedge fund “particularly adept at shorting, with over 90% of my shorts ending as profitable investments”. Of note is that the Company’s short position before the open on February 11, 2014 was approximately 50%, far in excess of its typical 15-20% ratio.

The article is libelous per se and contains numerous false statements and inaccuracies about the Company and members of the Company’s management and Board of Directors. The author performed little or no independent research on the Company and instead relied entirely upon the false allegations contained in a complaint filed by a single disgruntled shareholder in the District Court of Colorado, a complaint to which the Company has not yet filed an answer and that has been dismissed three times in the State of Nevada and once in the very same Colorado Court. Moreover, the Plaintiff in the action, Yidam, Ltd., which is purportedly controlled by Brian Brammel, filed these actions in an attempt to coerce a financial payment because the Company was unable to compensate him for introducing investors to the Company since he was not registered or licensed as a broker, services for which Company could not permissibly compensate him.

The author refers to this complaint as a “Whistleblower Document”, which it is not as the Plaintiff never contacted the Company regarding any perceived misconduct until it declined to pay him the commission he requested. Moreover, Brian Brammel was never an officer, Director or employee of the Company, nor did he ever provide any consulting work for or on behalf of Nanoviricides, Inc.

In describing the facts and circumstances surrounding the Company’s corporate history, the author simply accepted Yidam’s fabricated version of the facts contained in the complaint. The author did not contact the Company or any member of management for their account of the facts in the complaint. The author simply repeated the false allegations and embellished these false allegations with false, and inapplicable “information”, assertions, innuendo, and incendiary statements.

Further, the author makes unsupported statements using purposefully false inaccurate and inflammatory headlines and phrases such as “House of Cards”, “Stolen the Company”, “False Claims” and “NNVC Insiders are Getting Rich”. However, there are no independently, verifiable facts to support any of these and other statements which the author fabricated and Seeking Alpha published.

As a result of this article and a massive short position by whom what the company believes is the author and others, the Company’s stock price declined by approximately 31% during trading and the Company and its shareholders lost approximately $80,000,000 in market value that day and which is continuing.

It is clear that this was a calculated attempt by a short seller to use untrue and unsupported information to artificially deflate and maliciously manipulate the price of the Company's securities for its personal gain. Significantly, the author in conjunction with and through the encouragement of Seeking Alpha used Seeking Alpha as its vehicle to distribute and disseminate this information and to damage the Company and its shareholders.

There is no protection for these false and libelous statements contained in the article. It is not news and the content is not accurate. Therefore, on behalf of the Company, we are demanding that Seeking Alpha immediately retract the article, removing all reference to it from its website and to cease listing it, in all media, in any promotional materials, email or newsletters as a recommended article. Additionally, we demand that you immediately announce and publish through all websites, media outlets, emails or other sources your retraction and disassociation from the author's article and statements therein. Further, on behalf of the Company, we also demand that you provide us with the name and address of the author publishing under the name "Pump Terminator". The actions of this author, and Seeking Alpha for failing to verify or review any of the content are of the utmost significance to the Company which is not only obligated to defending itself against these baseless attacks, but to returning shareholders to the position they were before this article was posted.

Again, the Company demands that Seeking Alpha immediately remove the article from its website and any other place it might exist, and deliver the name, address and any additional contact information for Pump Terminator to the undersigned by the close of business today, otherwise, the Company will have no choice but to commence an action to obtain relief for the damages caused by the article on your website.

Once you have had the opportunity to review this correspondence, please do not hesitate to contact the undersigned.

Very truly yours,

Peter Campitiello
